NEWS RELEASE

MEDIA ADVISORY

Andrew Young, longtime civil rights activist and former U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, will participate in a number of activities at the University of Dayton on Thursday, Nov. 18. All are open for media coverage.

1:30-3 p.m.: UD students, faculty and staff will pose questions to Young in the Sears Recital Hall in the Jesse Philips Humanities Center.

3:05-3:15 p.m.: Young will offer closing remarks to 600 high school students participating in the Model U.N. High School Conference in the Kennedy Union ballroom.

8 p.m.: Young will offer an address, "Still Marching with Martin: Reflections on Civil Rights," in the Thomas J. Frericks Athletic and Convocation Center. Free to the public, but tickets required. Call (937) 229-2545 or order tickets online at www.udayton.edu/~ku/tickets.

Young's campus appearance commemorates the 40th anniversary of Martin Luther King Jr.'s civil rights speech in the same building just days before he accepted the Nobel Peace Prize in Oslo, Norway. Young, who then served as the executive director of the Southern Christian Leadership Council, opened that evening with a "Report from the South," according to the evening's program.

Young's talk inaugurates the University of Dayton Diversity Lecture Series co-sponsored by the offices of the president and provost. The lecture series is part of a larger strategic plan to increase inclusion and diversity on campus and prepare students, faculty, staff and the Dayton community for success in a global society.

For more information, contact Roger Crum, associate professor of art history and chair of a campus committee organizing Young's visit, at (937) 229-1369.
